Student Announcements

- Students: school picture packets and order payments are due by Wednesday, December 5th. They may be turned in sooner.
- Seniors, please see Ms. Dougherty for graduation information. Please provide your contact information to Ms. Herr. December graduates need to be sized for your cap and gown as soon as possible.
- Students, please check in with your teachers before going to the restroom between classes.

Faculty/Staff Information

- Weekly Duty — Cafeteria: Dougherty; Hallway: Crouch
- Contact Ms. Crouch TODAY if you would like to order a Poor Man's Lunch from the Murphy Volunteer Fire Department on Thursday, December 6th. Plates are $5, and proceeds benefit Shop With a Cop.
- Monday, December 3rd is a half day for students.
- Teachers, immediately after dismissal, on Monday, there will be a test administrator training in Ms. Crouch's room in preparation for the new Common Exams. All staff need to be trained (except Mr. Payne). Ms. Maxey needs all accommodations that high school students will be using on MSL's and the English II EOC.
- Teachers, please speak with your students about the Common Exams. Stress the importance of the students being here on test days. They cannot receive credit for the course if they don't take the Common Exam.
- Remind students that their school picture packets and order payments are due by Wednesday December 5th. They may be turned in sooner.

Gmail and Google Drive

NOTE: With new computers hopefully coming soon, I thought you all might find this helpful. Our Google Drive, accessible through our CCS Gmail accounts, now has some interesting features. Consider this when saving and sending documents.

Posted by Phil Sharp, Product Manager

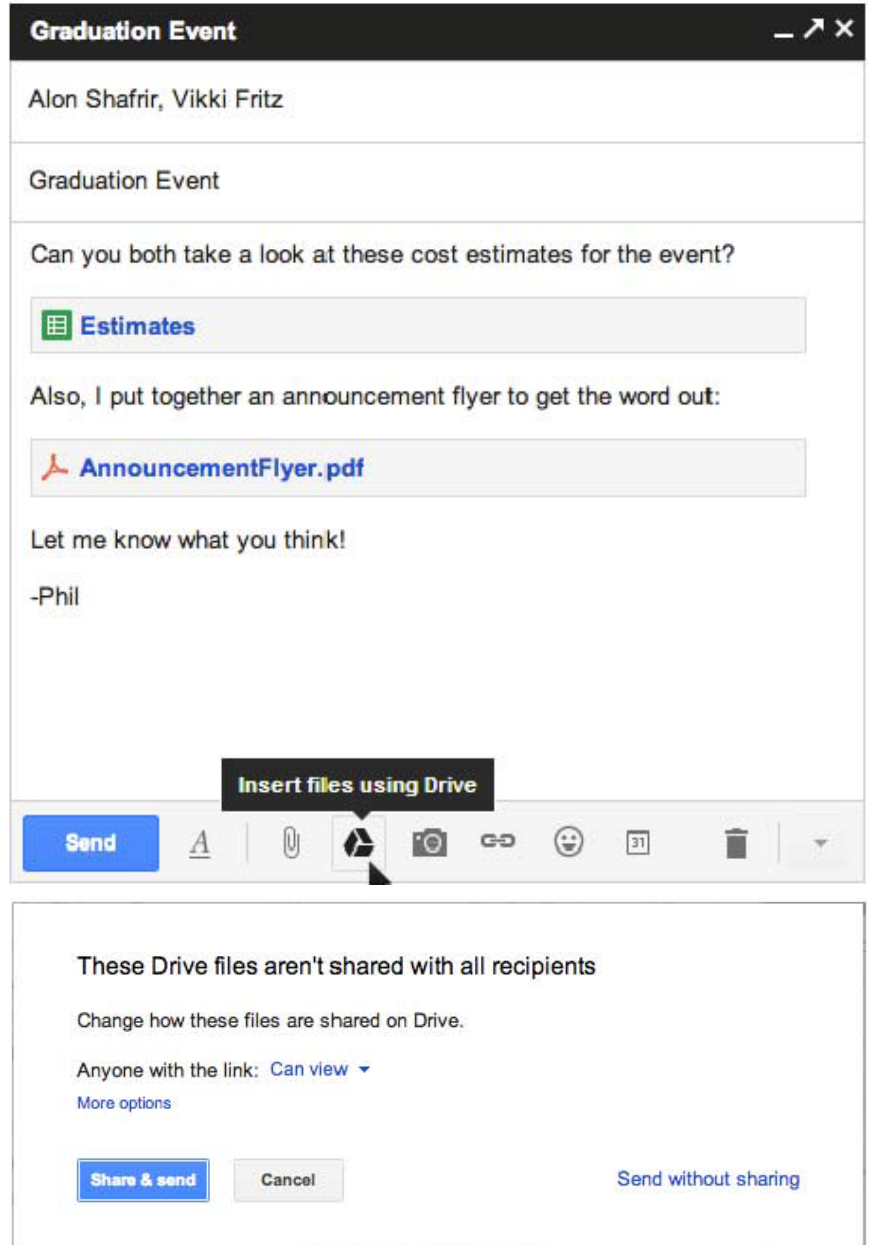

Since Google Drive launched in April, millions of people have started using Drive to keep, create and share files. Today, it's even easier to share with others: you can insert files from Drive directly into an email without leaving your Gmail.

Have you ever tried to attach a file to an email only to find out it's too large to send? Now with Drive, you can insert files up to 10GB -- 400 times larger than what you can send as a traditional attachment. Also, because you're sending a file stored in the cloud, all your recipients will have access to the same, most-up-to-date version.

Like a smart assistant, Gmail will also double-check that your recipients all have access to any files you're sending. This works like Gmail's forgotten attachment detector: whenever you send a file from Drive that isn't shared with everyone, you'll be prompted with the option to change the file's sharing settings without leaving your email. It'll even work with Drive links pasted directly into emails.

So whether it's photos from your recent camping trip, video footage from your brother's wedding, or a presentation to your boss, all your stuff is easy to find and easy to share with Drive and Gmail. To get started, just click on the Drive icon while you're composing a message. Note that this feature is rolling out over the next few days and is only available with Gmail's new compose experience, so you'll need to opt-in if you haven't already.

Fun idea of the day

Inspired by our students' curiosity and constant desire to learn about something – even when it is not the subject we are trying to teach – I would like to dedicate this section of the newsletter to our students and what they are learning. Today's idea comes from Jeremy Lovingood, who is interested in learning about astronomy. This application, "Planetarium," is available at the Google Chrome store for free, or you can go to <http://neave.com/planetarium/app/> to try it out. Set our location manually using a map pinpointer, then watch the stars, planets, and constellations in real time.
